

AAHKS Clinical Research Journal Arthroplasty Today Announces Their New Editor-in-Chief and Deputy Editor-in Chief

January 10, 2025 (Chicago, IL) – Since the inception of the American Association of Hip and Knee Surgeons (AAHKS) in 1991, we’ve been committed to providing educational and research opportunities to our members. One of the ways in which we’ve done so is through AAHKS’ official open access journal, Arthroplasty Today (AT).

Arthroplasty Today brings together the clinical and scientific foundations for joint replacement of the hip and knee in an open-access, online format. The journal presents material to practicing orthopaedic surgeons to apprise them of developments in the field, proves useful in the care of patients and assists in understanding the scientific foundation of this subspecialty area of joint replacement.

Arthroplasty Today, the sister journal to the Journal of Arthroplasty (JOA), was recently added to Clarivate’s Web of Science, the world’s most trusted citation database. Arthroplasty Today has proven to be a leading publication amongst practicing orthopaedic surgeons who seek knowledge on patient outcomes, economic and policy issues, prosthetic design, biomechanics, biomaterials and biologic response to arthroplasty, among other topics.

For 2025, AAHKS is pleased to announce the new Arthroplasty Today Editor-in-Chief, Brett R. Levine, MD, MS, and Deputy Editor-in Chief, Anna R. Cohen-Rosenblum, MD, MSc.

Dr. Levine is serving a five-year term as the AT Editor-in-Chief, following in the footsteps of his predecessors who made remarkable strides with the journal – growing it exponentially in volume and citations. Dr. Levine who is already very familiar with the journal, served for five years as the journal’s Deputy Editor-in Chief. He has also served as chair of the AAHKS Patient and Public Relations Committee, making astounding contributions in that role as well. Dr. Levine is a fellowship-trained, board-certified orthopaedic surgeon with nearly two decades of experience with Midwest Orthopaedics at Rush. He recently moved to Washington, DC to serve as Chief of Joint Arthroplasty Division, MedStar Orthopaedic Institute, Washington Region. He graduated from Georgetown University School of Medicine and did his residency training at NYU Langone Orthopedic Hospital. He’s been a very loyal and committed member of AAHKS since 2008.

Dr. Cohen-Rosenblum is serving a five-year term as the new Deputy Editor-in-Chief. She follows in the footsteps of Dr. Levine, who worked incredibly hard to make the journal a respected and recognized source in the medical literature space. Dr. Cohen-Rosenblum began reviewing for Arthroplasty Today in 2018 and served as the journal’s Social Media Editor where she expanded the journal’s digital footprint across various social media platforms. She began practicing in New Orleans at Louisiana State University and recently moved to New York City to join the NYU Langone Health Department of Orthopedic Surgery. Dr. Cohen-Rosenblum graduated from Albany Medical College, did her residency at the University of Chicago and completed her Fellowship training in adult reconstruction at the University of Virginia. A member of AAHKS since 2017, she is continuously exhibiting exceptional commitment and contributions, including serving as an AAHKS Health Policy Fellow and chair of the AAHKS Young Arthroplasty Group Committee.

Join us in welcoming Drs. Levine and Cohen-Rosenblum to their respective roles within Arthroplasty Today. We're confident that with their experience and tenacity, the journal will continue to enhance the AAHKS mission and reputation, furthering the journal's positioning as the leader in providing developments in the field of arthroplasty.

###

About the American Association of Hip and Knee Surgeons

Established in 1991, the mission of AAHKS is to be the definitive global authority on excellence in hip and knee care through excellence, integrity, patient-centered care, innovation, lifelong learning and inclusivity. AAHKS has a membership of over 5,500 surgeons and other hip and knee health care professionals.

Contact:

Kenneth Robinson, Communications Manager

KRobinson@AAHKS.org